Memorandum on the Rainfall of June and July and the Probable Amount during August and September 1955.

1. WEATHER IN INDIA IN JUNE AND JULY

June—June was a month of timely and well-distributed monsoon rains over most parts of the country.

A temporary advance of the Arabian Sea branch of the monsoon into Travancore-Cochin and Malabar—South Kanara had taken place by the 19th May in association with a depression which moved westwards across the extreme south Peninsula. This advance, was, however, not maintained. A revival of the monsoon took place over these areas by the 29th May when it finally established there. Its further advance into the south Konkan occurred by the 2nd June. There was a lull in the monsoon activity between the 5th and 8th. It again strengthened thereafter along the west coast south of Devgad and was vigorous in the south Konkan and adjoining Malabar—south Kanara between the 9th and 12th. It also extended as a feeble current into south Deccan (Desh) and Hyderabad by the 9th and into the north Konkan and south Gujarat by the 12th. The monsoon was again vigorous in Travancore-Cochin on the 15th.

The Bay of Bengal branch of the monsoon extended as a weak current into Assam on the 2nd and into sub-Himalayan West Bengal on the 4th. It was also strong in the Andamans on the 4th and 8th. Further advance of the monsoon into Gangetic West Bengal, Orissa and Bihar took place on the 9th and into east Uttar Pradesh by the next day. The monsoon was active in Assam and sub-Himalayan West Bengal between the 9th and 12th. According to newspaper reports, the continuous rains in the Kamrup and Lakhimpur districts of Assam caused several small tributaries of the Brahmaputra to swell, submerging nearly 50,000 acres of paddy field. Under the influence of a low pressure area which appeared over Vindhya Pradesh and neighbourhood on the 16th morning, the monsoon extended into Chota Nagpur on the 16th and into the central parts of the country by the 17th. It was active in east Uttar Pradesh between the 17th and 20th and caused locally heavy to very heavy falls in its northern parts on the 19th and 20th, Kunraghat (Gorakhpur) recording 12" of rain on the 20th, and Nautanwa Bazar 11" in 48 hours ending at 0830 hrs. IST on the same day. Strong monsoon conditions also prevailed over the belt extending from Assam to Bihar between the 18th and 22nd. According to press reports, the river Kosi rose in spate and its flood waters swept across about 250 villages in Darbhanga district affecting a population of over two lakhs. The swollen waters of the Brahmaputra were also reported to have inundated nine villages on both banks of the river around Dibrugarh. The monsoon extended to north Gujarat and east Rajasthan by the 18th and 21st respectively. It remained, however, weak over most parts of the Peninsula outside the west coast during the third week of the month. Under the influence of two depressions the monsoon strengthened and was generally active over Orissa, the central parts of the country and most parts of the Peninsula, during the last week of the month.

Under the influence of two westerly waves moving across the western Himalayas the monsoon also extended to west Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) and Jammu and Kashmir by the 28th. It was vigorous in the Konkan between the 22nd and 24th and extended into Saurashtra and Kutch by the 26th as a feeble current. Widespread and locally heavy to very heavy rain occurred in Madhya Pradesh between the 27th and 30th, in south Deccan (Desh) on the 29th and 30th, and in near Malabar—south Kanara on the 30th.

The rainfall for June was in large excess in west Madhya Pradesh and north Hyderabad and in slight to moderate excess in east Uttar Pradesh, east Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat, Vindhya Pradesh, east Madhya Pradesh, the Konkan, south Hyderabad, Malabar—south Kanara and Travancore-Cochin. It was normal in the Bay Islands, Assam, sub-Himalayan West Bengal, Orissa, West Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I), Gujarat and Deccan (Desh), in slight to moderate defect in Gangetic West Bengal, Chota Nagpur, Bihar, west Rajasthan, coastal Andhradesa, Rayalaseema, Tamilnad and Mysore and in large defect in Saurashtra and Kutch. Averaged over the plains of India, rainfall during the month was in excess by 8 per cent. Data from Jammu and Kashmir are not available.

July—July of this year was characterised by weak monsoon conditions. A most unusual feature was the absence of monsoon depressions, a number of which usually develop in the north Bay of Bengal in normal years and travel west or north-westwards across the central parts of the country or the Gangetic Valley. In the absence of these depressions the monsoon remained generally weak and the Bay current failed to get diverted into the interior of the country. On the other hand, a number of westerly waves moved eastwards across the extreme north of the country and along the southern periphery of the Himalayan massif, thus frequently taking the monsoon current to the hills and sub-montane regions of the Himalayas. The net result was that heavy rain occurred in and near the eastern Himalayas, culminating in floods in the region from east Uttar Pradesh to Assam, while there was a deficiency of rainfall over the central belt of the country, the rainfall being particularly scanty over the western region of the belt; there was only slight rainfall in Saurashtra and Kutch and north Gujarat, while west Rajasthan did not receive any rain during the month.

The monsoon was vigorous in and near the Punjab—Kumaon hills on the 1st and strong in the north Punjab (I) on the 2nd and 3rd. Fairly widespread rain also occurred in Madhya Bharat and east Rajasthan on the 1st and in the plains of Uttar Pradesh, in Vindhya Pradesh and the south Punjab (I) between the 1st and 3rd. In association with a low pressure area over east Uttar Pradesh, the monsoon was again active over Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab (I) and adjoining areas on the 7th and 8th. The river Ravi was reported to be in floods and to have washed away crops and property worth 9 lacs in Gurdaspur district. There was also good rainfall in the hills and sub-montane regions of the eastern Himalayas during the first ten days of the month, causing the river Brahmaputra and her tributaries in Assam, the river Teesta in sub-Himalayan West Bengal and Kosi in Bihar to be in spate. According to newspaper reports, flood waters of the river Kosi swept over 800 villages in Darbhanga and Saharsa districts of Bihar, affecting a population of over 500,000. The monsoon, however, was generally weak over the rest of the country during the first fortnight.

A low pressure area developed over Bihar on the 16th morning and moved to east Uttar Pradesh where it intensified into a depression by the 18th morning. The depression persisted there till the 20th and thereafter broke up over the Nepal Himalayas. Under the influence of the depression vigorous monsoon conditions prevailed in Bihar on the 16th, in east Uttar Pradesh between the 16th and 22nd and in the Punjab—Kumaon hills between the 16th and 20th. As a result of heavy rains, the Ganga and six other rivers in Uttar Pradesh were reported to have risen in spate and flooded thousands of acres of land in Jaunpur, Faizabad and Azamgarh districts. An active western disturbance moved across the extreme north of the country between the 20th and 21st causing fairly widespread heavy to very heavy rain in and near the Punjab hills on the 20th. With the passing away of this disturbance the axis of the monsoon trough shifted to the foot of the Himalayas and a spell of heavy to very heavy rain again occurred along and near the eastern Himalayas between the 23rd and 28th. According to newspaper reports, the floods in sub-Himalayan West Bengal disrupted rail and road communications and submerged a number of villages and part of Jalpaiguri town. The heavy rains in Assam were also reported to have caused the water level in Brahmaputra to rise to a dangerous level, resulting in rail communications being cut off with the rest of India and necessitating large scale evacuation from affected areas. The monsoon was strong in the Konkan during the last ten days of the month. It also strengthened over the rest of the Peninsula outside Gujarat and Saurashtra and Kutch and in Madhya Pradesh during the last four days with a simultaneous welcome decrease of rains over Assam and Bihar. Sub-Himalayan West Bengal, however, continued to get heavy rain till the end of the month.

The rainfall during July was in large excess in sub-Himalayan West Bengal and east Uttar Pradesh and in moderate excess in Assam, Bihar, Hyderabad and Tamilnad. It was normal in Gangetic West Bengal, the Konkan and Rayalaseema and in slight defect in the Bay Islands, Chota Nagpur, west Uttar Pradesh and coastal Andhradesa. It was in moderate to large defect in Orissa, the Punjab(I), east Rajasthan, the central parts of the country, Gujarat, Saurashtra and Kutch, Deccan (Desh), Malabar—south Kanara, Mysore and Travancore-Cochin, there being no rain in west Rajasthan during the month. Averaged over the plains of India, the rainfall during July was 20 per cent in defect. Data from Jammu and Kashmir are not available.

June and July combined—Both the Arabian Sea and the Bay of Bengal branches of the monsoon got established over the country on about the normal date. The activity of the monsoon during the month of June was also generally good, but thereafter, the monsoon weakened considerably and July was a month of generally weak monsoon conditions, resulting in deficient rainfall over most parts of the country, the areas most affected being west Rajasthan, Gujarat and Saurashtra and Kutch, where according to newspaper reports drought conditions prevailed. On the other hand, due to the heavy rain in and near the Eastern Himalayas, floods occurred over the region from east Uttar Pradesh to Assam.

The rainfall during June and July together was in large excess in east Uttar Pradesh and north Hyderabad, in moderate excess in sub-Himalayan West Bengal and south Hyderabad, in slight excess in Assam, and normal in the Bay Islands, Gangetic West Bengal, Bihar west Madhya Pradesh, the Konkan, Tamilnad, Malabar—south Kanara and Travancore-Cochin. It was in slight defect in Chota Nagpur, west Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab(I), Vindhya Pradesh, east Madhya Pradesh, Deccan (Desh), coastal Andhradesa and Rayalaseema, in moderate defect in Orissa, east Rajasthan, Madhya Bharat and Mysore and in large defect in west Rajasthan, Gujarat and Saurashtra and Kutch. Averaged over the plains of India, the rainfall during June and July was 10 per cent in defect. Data from Jammu and Kashmir are not available.

The following table gives for each sub-division and for the Indian area as a whole the total rainfall during the period, its departure from normal and the percentage departure from normal.

2. CONDITIONS HAVING INFLUENCE ON THE RAINS OF AUGUST AND SEPTEMBER 1955

No forecast, or rather, foreshadowing of the monsoon rainfall of June to September was issued in June due to non-receipt of Dutch Harbour temperature data. Recent data have been examined to see if any useful foreshadowing for the remainder of the season can now be given. The relevant data are the following.

Indian Pressure—Pressure was generally below normal throughout the country in June and above normal in July.

Averaged over the plains, the pressure departure was -1.2 mb. in June and +0.8 mb. in July.

Snow in the mountain regions of Northwest India—The snowfall reports received from the Western Himalayas for June and July indicate that snowfall was nearly normal.

Indian Ocean Pressure—At Mauritius, pressure was in excess by 0".019 in June and in defect by 0".018 in July.

Java Rain—The monthly rainfall departures from October 1954 to February 1955 were +29 per cent, +81 per cent, -5 per cent, -3 per cent, and -3 per cent respectively.

South Rhodesia Rain—Rainfall from October 1954 to April 1955 was in excess by 12.0".

South American Pressure—Pressure departures were as follows:—

| | Buenos Aires | Cordoba | Santiago |
|-----------------|--------------|----------|----------|
| June 1955 | -0.3 mm. | -0.1 mm. | +1.1 mm. |
| July 1955 | -0.3 mm. | +1.2 mm. | +1.6 mm. |

Punjab Temperature Range—Departures of the Punjab Temperature Range were as follows:—

|------------------|--------|
| April 1955 | +3.6°F |
| May 1955 | -1.1°F |

Indo-Gangetic River Discharges—Mean departure of the total river discharges during April and May 1955 was -247 (in 10,000 cusecs).

3. INFERENCES FROM THE DATA

In foreshadowing the August and September rainfall in the Peninsula [taken to consist of Saurashtra and Kutch, Gujarat, the Konkan, Deccan (Desh), Madhya Pradesh and Hyderabad] the chief factors in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data are pressure distribution in India, south Rhodesia rain, Mauritius pressure and Java rain. This year Mauritius pressure is favourable, Indian pressure and south Rhodesia rain are unfavourable and Java rain very unfavourable. The statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the total rainfall of August and September 1955 in the Peninsula will not be above 105 per cent of the normal.

For Northwest India [taken to consist of the Uttar Pradesh, the Punjab(I) (including PEPSU and Delhi), and Rajasthan] the factors used in the order of decreasing reliability, as judged by the available data, are South Rhodesia rain, South American pressure, Indo-Gangetic River discharges, Indian pressure and Punjab temperature range. This year Indo-Gangetic River discharges are very favourable, South American pressure favourable, Indian pressure moderately unfavourable and the remaining two factors are very unfavourable. The statistical analysis indicates that there is a four to one chance that the August-September rainfall of this year in Northwest India is likely to be between 76 and 129 per cent of the normal.

4. SUMMARY

The total rainfall of August and September 1955 is likely to be slightly below normal in the Peninsula and normal in Northwest India.
